On behalf of the Organizing Committee, we are pleased to announce the Third International Symposium on Technetium and Other Radiometals in Chemistry and Medicine (TERACHEM 2018) which continues the long tradition of the previous symposia on Technetium and Rhenium for nuclear medicine application. This coming edition of the Symposium will be held with the support of the Society of Radiopharmaceutical Sciences (SRS), at the Convention Center in Bressanone (Forum Bressanone), Italy, on September 26-29, 2018.

TERACHEM 2018 will offer plenary lectures and presentations on the recent development of existing and new, medically relevant and interesting radiometals for diagnosis and therapy and their application in chemistry, radiopharmacy and nuclear medicine. During the three days of the symposium, young scientists and students will have the opportunity to engage in scientifically exciting discussions with experts in the field in an informal setting.

TERACHEM 2018 is an ideal occasion to share knowledge and gain a deeper insight into all aspects of radiometals in medicine, not only by attending lectures, oral communications and poster presentations, but also by meeting leading experts from around the world. This will provide you with diverse opportunities to personally interact with decision-making professionals and potential customers from all fields of Radiochemistry, Radiopharmacy and Nuclear Medicine, as well as to illustrate your products and services.

As in the previous editions, the conference venue will be Bressanone, a charming town located in northern Italy, between the Garda Lake and the Austrian border. The Bressanone area offers spectacular views of the Dolomites and attracts numerous visitors every year with its world-famous winter sport facilities, beautiful hiking tracks, ancient castles, and cozy villages.

We look forward to your participation which will help us again to making the coming edition of the Symposium a success!
